Katrina, this survey covers six major trait pairs, measured and displayed in graphs. Each trait is associated with a range of behaviors, strengths, and potential struggles. Remember, when it comes to personality, it is not better to be one way or the other. What is important is that you understand - and embrace - your unique personality.

This section of your report comes from your assessment responses. It reflects profiles typical of people who scored like you. Confirm or challenge the information based on your knowledge of yourself. Have someone who knows you well weigh in on the conversation too. Concentrate on the portions that describe you well.

Confirm Your Personality Feedback

The following pages review your six personality traits, listed in order from most extreme to least extreme.

Before flipping to your scores, use the list below to review the personality trait pairs. How well do you know yourself? Take a guess! Use the ovals right next to the pictures and fill in the oval on the side you think you lean toward. If you think you can easily go either way at times, put an X in the middle of the center arrow to note this. You can have someone who know you well share their guesses as well using the outer ovals (or a different symbol in the middle of the center arrow if they think you can go either way).

1 Your UNSTRUCTURED Personality Trait and Subtraits

Your score shows a strong drive to live without a lot of rules or restrictions. You see things from new and different angles, bringing fresh answers and better ways of doing things. You confidently figure out how to solve new problems, finding fun in the challenge.

You have a big-picture focus and don't want to get bogged down in details or busy work. When standards and priorities are needed, you'd rather set them yourself rather than be locked into the way things have always been done.

Keep in mind that a strength overdone can become a weakness. Inconsistency can be a stumbling block while following rules can increase effectiveness. Develop good habits for day-to-day living, since surviving and succeeding in today's world may require some routine and attention to detail. Balance your drive for independence with wisdom and self-control, learning from the experience and wisdom of others so you can reach your full potential.

2 Your FACTUAL Personality Trait and Subtraits

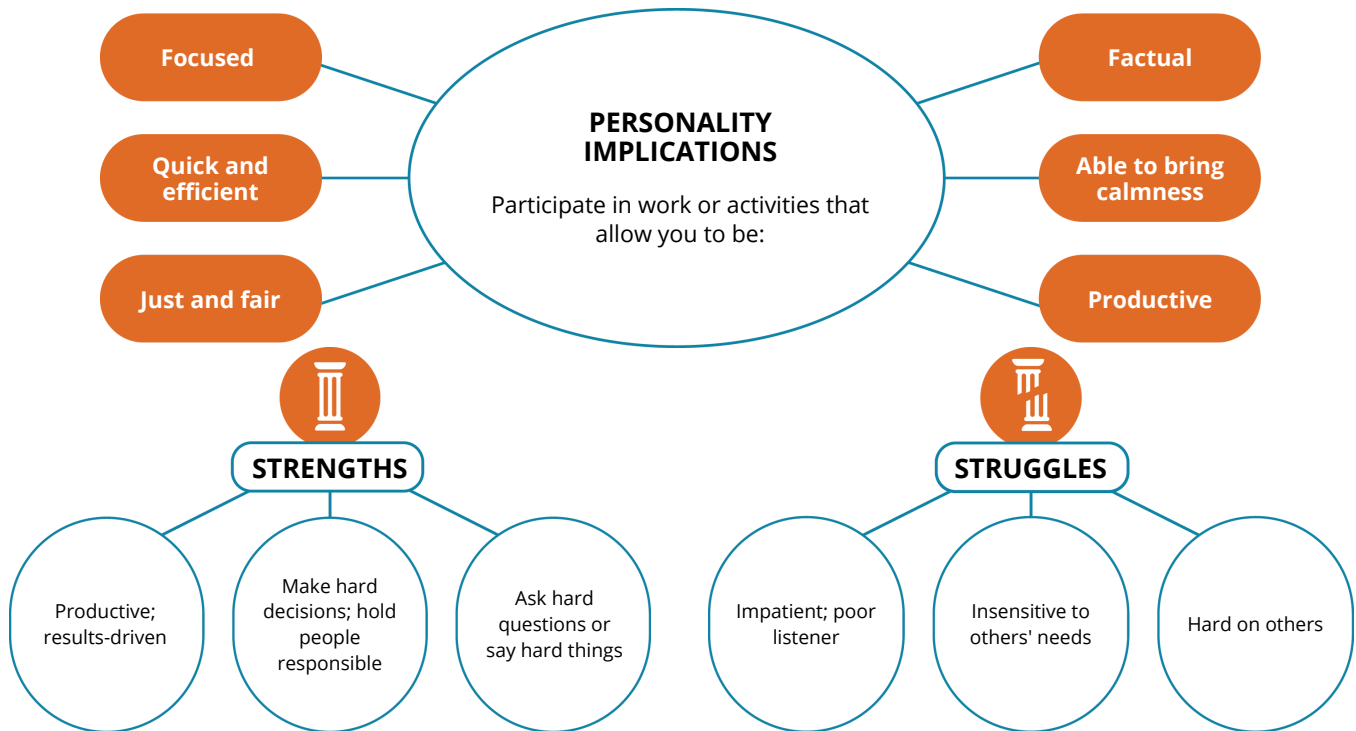

Your score shows that you call things as you see them. You are task-focused and like to keep things moving.

You work well in all kinds of settings. You are not easily bothered if others around you are unkind or unsupportive; you don't take it personally and let it ruin your day. You're hard to scare off, even if there is rejection or conflict. Because of this, you might enjoy work or activities related to sales, management, politics, or law.

Keep in mind that every upside can have a downside. You may accidentally hurt someone's feelings without being aware of it. Or you may overlook others' needs and seem harsh or uncaring. Naturally strong-willed, you might come across as wanting to have things your way. Try to be more kind, patient, and understanding to soften any rough edges. This will help you be more effective in dealing with others.

3 Your AUTHORITATIVE Personality Trait and Subtraits

Your score shows that you naturally like to be in control in most any setting and may push for independence. A natural, confident leader, you trust yourself and want to be in charge. Your desire to influence and persuade may be evident in several areas of life. You might avoid situations where you consistently have to be a follower.

You tend to see the "big picture", which helps you see things differently, leading to new and exciting ideas that you want to see through. You don't hold back expressing your ideas and opinions.

There are two sides to every coin. Because of how much you like to be in charge, you might take the lead when you don't have the necessary experience or facts. You might overlook what is needed to make your big-picture ideas become a reality. Practice some caution and listen to good advice from others who have a different perspective.

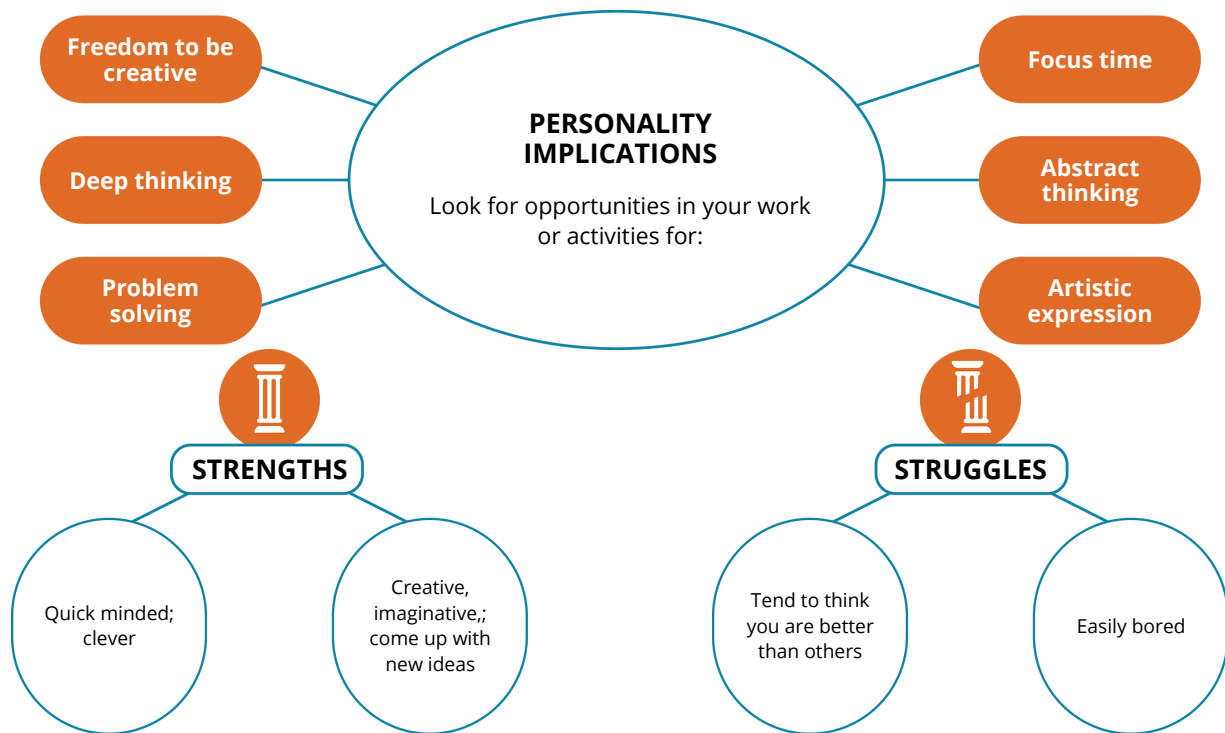

4 Your CREATIVE Personality Trait and Subtraits

Your score shows that you are super creative. You are clever and quick minded, great at coming up with new ideas and answers to problems, even odd or unusual ones. You like to daydreaming or think about things from different angles, sometimes just for the fun of it.

You may express your creativity in a bunch of different ways, including problem solving, working with your hands, or being artistically creative (i.e., in writing, music, drama, or visual arts.)

Every upside can have a downside if you overdo it. If you don't consider the practical steps needed to make your ideas work, you can create problems that aren't fun to solve. Lack of focus may make you a great starter, but not a great finisher. You may forget important practical matters. To be more effective, don't hesitate to use lists, set (and keep) deadlines, and have someone check in on your progress.

5 Your RESERVED/OUTGOING Personality Trait and Subtraits

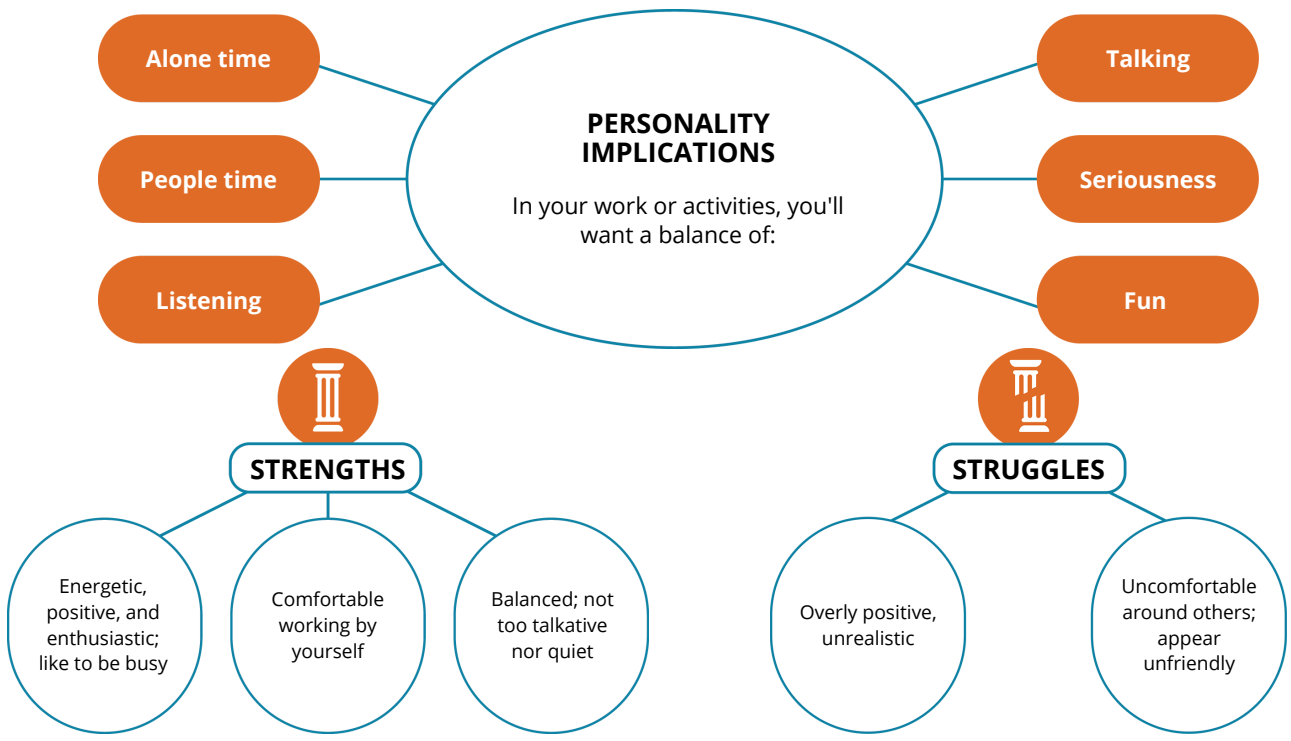

Your score shows that you probably enjoy both time with others and time alone. You're good at talking and are comfortable in meeting others. However, you likely talk more and are more open when you are among friends. You probably smile a fair bit, are pleasant to be around, and find it easy to fit in with different groups. You're really great at helping others in a practical, caring way.

Though you should plan to be around people some of the time each day, you may get stressed if you have to meet strangers or large numbers of people on a regular basis. Balance your time between being with people and being alone, and give yourself a chance to think about what is happening around you.

Overall, your flexibility and balance around people will help you to be comfortable in lots of different social situations.

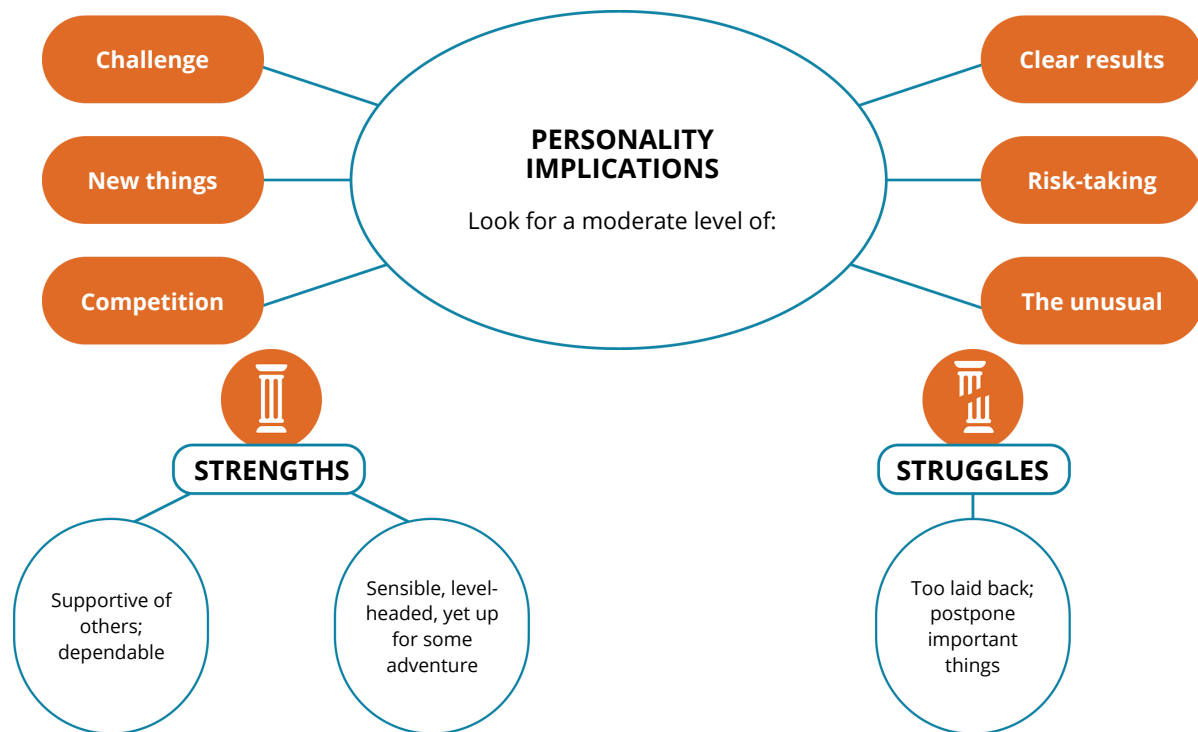

6 Your CAREFUL/ADVENTUROUS Personality Trait and Subtraits

Your score shows that you are balanced when it comes to being bold or cautious. You like some adventure and some security in your life. You will step out into new areas when it makes sense, but probably prefer to do a little homework on possible risks. You're open to change if it is reasonable, but you probably do not thrive on uncertainty.

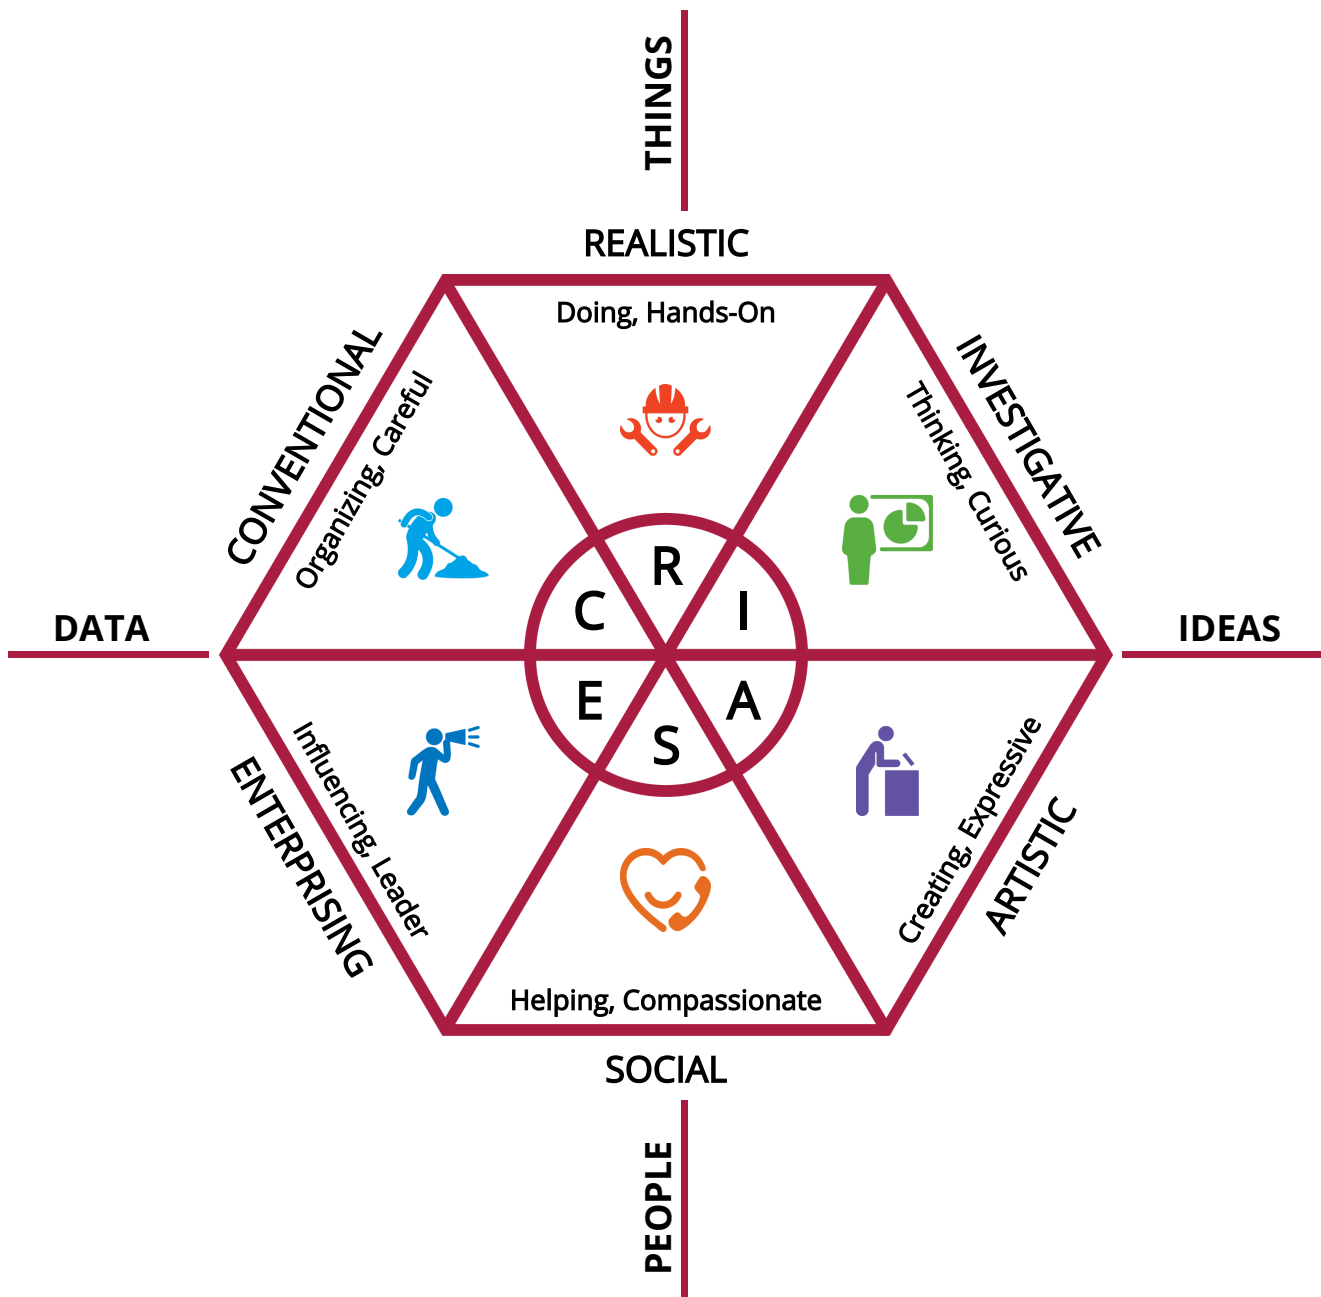

Also, you like to have good reason to do the things you do and can set priorities wisely. You probably have a good balance between your desires and the amount of time, energy, and money that you spend to get them.

In everyday life you'll find that you'll get to do things you like and things you don't like. This section highlights some of the activities, occupations and subjects which interest you most. It may reveal particular areas in which you may want to focus. Let's go exploring!

Study the diagram below to help you understand the six General Interest Areas of the Holland code. Then turn the page to see your personal results.

Six General Interest Areas

Katrina, discovering your general interests is super important. People tend to excel when they are interested in what they do! Different people are interested in different things. When you can be involved in areas that interest you, it adds fun to the mix, even with difficult or otherwise boring tasks.

The more you can participate in areas that excite you due to a high interest level, the more likely you are to be happy -- which lowers your stress too. There are several ways to categorize career interest.

There are 6 main General Interest Areas. 31,000+ occupations can all be divided into these six areas. WOW!

Below, the graph to the left and the list to the right below help you see where your interests fall within the six General Interest Areas. Keeping these in mind can help you make the best decisions for the highest level of joy and satisfaction in what you do.

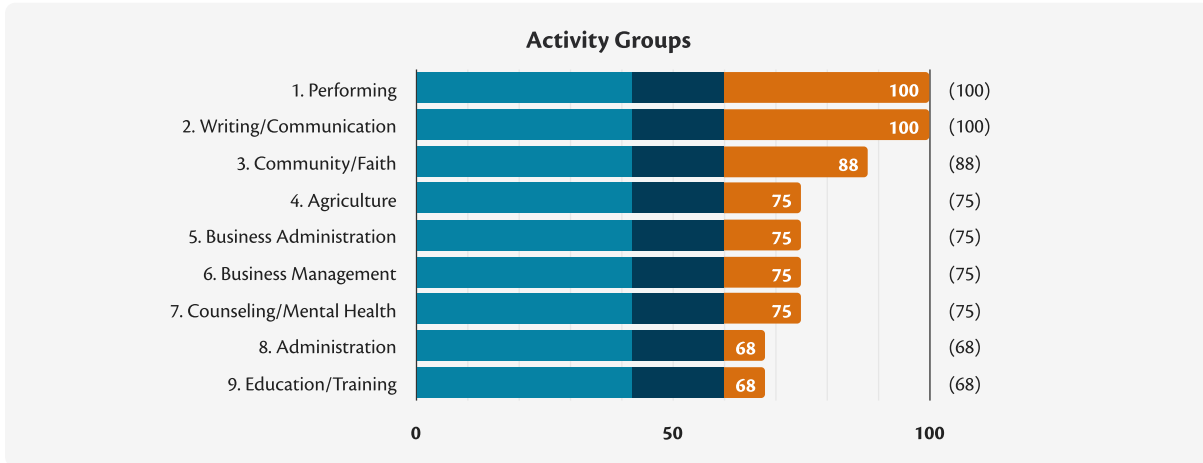

-  Creating (Artistic) (28%)
-  Influencing (Enterprising) (23%)
-  Organizing (Conventional) (19%)
-  Helping (Social) (18%)
-  Doing (Realistic) (8%)
-  Thinking (Investigative) (4%)

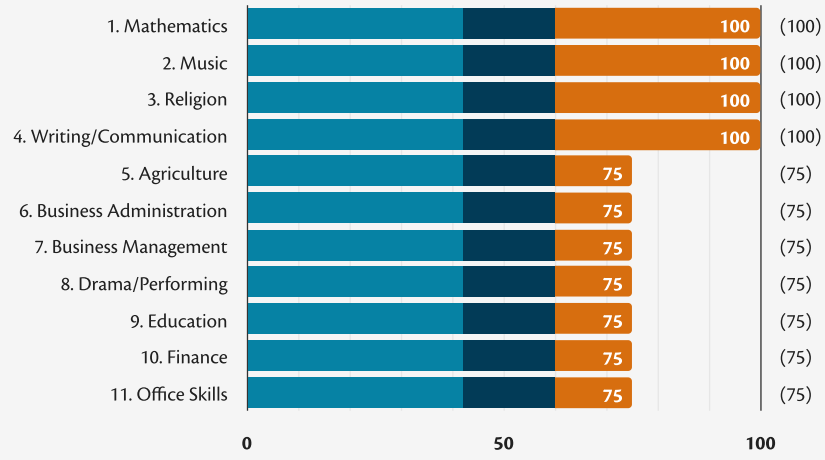

Note: These result numbers were rounded.

The following tables below show your highest scores on the Activities, Occupations, and Subjects groups. They do not take into account your experiences or skills -- only your interests. You may begin to see some themes as you review these three tables.

Subject Groups

Katrina, an understanding of your skills will be important as you decide where to invest your time and energy - and eventually your career choice. For best results, match these to areas that utilize your best skill. Doing something that comes naturally invites joy!

Match these skills to activities that best use them to maximize your potential. First of all, you'll start at a higher baseline, learn faster, and achieve more than if you didn't have a natural skill in that area. For example, some people could study music and practice singing for years. If they lack the natural skills to excel, they'll never find real satisfaction, success, and joy trying to be a professional singer.

Second, working in your natural strengths is just more fun. People experience less stress using skills in which they naturally excel. Usually these skills have been recognized, valued, and rewarded by others. Confidence grows as you use your natural skills, leading to even more success and joy.

The bottom line? You are most likely to excel when you use the skills that come naturally and bring joy. Be mindful of your lower skill areas, but understand that it is generally unproductive to make them a primary focus. In the area of skills, try to swim with the current, not against it.

Note: This section's skill scores are self-assessed, not from an achievement or aptitude test. Research indicates that self-assessment can give an accurate overview of a person's skills.

Develop Your Skills and Abilities

Even natural skills require training, education, hard work, and dedication to maintain and further develop them. Most successful people work diligently to use and improve their natural strengths. A professional golfer hits hundreds of balls every day and a concert pianist spends hours practicing in order to fully develop their natural athletic and musical abilities.

Study your highest-ranked skills. Analyze any relationship among them. Is there overlap? A common theme? Do any relate more to areas that you would use just for fun rather than as a basis for something greater? Are there ways that hobby skills could transfer to your other responsibilities?

People skilled in this area typically make decisions quickly, decisively, and confidently; they are able to take initiative. They are able to be flexible, discerning, creative, are dependable and have great communication skills. They are good at relationship building and problem solving as well as teaching, training, and mentoring. People with strong leadership skills are needed in all career areas.

People who score high in musical skills typically have a natural ability to express rhythm, play musical instruments, interpret and express emotions or ideas vocally or instrumentally, understand musical symbols and theory, and differentiate qualities and pitches of tones. Education and/or extensive training, along with strong discipline enabling long hours of practice, are required to sufficiently refine one's skills.

Individuals with these skills are often good at delegating and coordinating responsibilities, making decisions, communicating, and persuading and motivating people. Others respond well to their leadership. Skill strengths may also include accurate record keeping, filing, typing, word processing, knowledge of office procedures, accuracy with basic math, knowledge of telephone systems, and proficiency in the use of office machines. They often pay attention to detail and are able to work quickly, accurately, neatly, and in an organized manner. People with this as a high skill should consider occupations that include managing, promoting, delegating, and leading others.

People high in this skill group are typically perceptive, interpretive, creative, original, and expressive in areas such as music, dance, art, film, and theater. They often have fine motor eye-hand coordination and dexterity, and they are able to express both ideas and emotions through their craft. Education and/or extensive training are required to sufficiently refine one's skills. These skills are useful in careers involving performing arts.

People high in this skill group typically like to clearly communicate their thoughts and ideas through writing or speaking. They have the ability to synthesize information and present key points logically and concisely in reports, letters, summaries or presentations. They may enjoy putting their thoughts down on paper, creating original stories, novels, or poems, and/or socializing and working with others. They will do well in careers which enable them to communicate in their preferred style and area of interest.

Understanding your Priorities can open your eyes to the importance of really knowing what's most important to you. If you have your priorities down, everything else seems to fall into place.

Priorities will direct you to classes you take, activities to participate in, and even to your future career decisions. They affect your whole life! You might think that's a no-brainer. But a lot of folks get hung up in doing stuff that is low on their own priority list. It steals their time. It steals their productivity. It can even steal their joy.

Understanding and using these priorities will bring meaning and purpose to what you do in your classes, your extra-curricular activities, and even the selection of your future career. The more your priorities line up with your reality, the better you will do and the more content you will be!

Katrina, you can be involved in something that is a good match for your interests, skills, and personality strengths. However, you can still experience dissatisfaction and stress if it does not match your priorities. For example, many people value working outdoors and will never feel totally comfortable if they are stuck inside. Others may need to know that they are helping people directly, and will not be satisfied working alone or with machines.

Some people only look for success in the material sense thinking it will be satisfying as well. All too often, they end up unfulfilled and burned out. Using priorities in making important decisions helps one avoid such disappointment and stress. Review your priorities to see if you are being consistent. Compare them to the way you are actually operating. This three-part section on priorities can help to guide your life and work.

Expect your priorities to change; these are yours and you can modify them whenever you want. Often they shift with age, experience, and changing family situations. Save this report for future reference. A periodic review of your priorities will enable you to see how well you are sticking to them and if adjusting any of them makes sense.

Listed from the most important to the least, these items show what you want in your surroundings or environment.

If you have the higher priority items in the settings in which you find yourself, you will be more satisfied.

1. Flexible Hours

I want control over my schedule, to adjust it when I want to.

2. Variety

I like talking to different people and doing different tasks every day.

3. Self-Governance

I want to do things my way (make decisions, try new things) without someone looking over my shoulder.

4. Being Outdoors

I enjoy being outdoors (contact with nature, fresh air) when doing most anything.

5. Challenge

I want to solve tough problems and restore order where there is chaos.

6. Adventure/Risks

I like to be where the action is and work with the unknown and unexpected.

7. Fairness

I like it when everyone is treated fairly regardless of who they are.

8. Harmony

I function best when everyone is considerate and gets along well, with little or no conflict.

9. Clean Environment

I like to work around very little mess or bad smells, and where I can keep myself fairly well-kept.

10. Organization

I like having structure, systems, order, and neatness around me.

11. Steadfastness

I like to have an established routine and avoid surprises.

12. Travel Opportunities

I enjoy taking trips to new and different places and I enjoy meeting new people.

These are the results you really want and expect from the activities and jobs you do.

Remember, none of these priorities are bad in and of themselves. The ones you choose represent what's important to YOU!

Why you do what you do is important and can help you determine your Life Purpose.

Experience shows that people who thoughtfully decide on a life purpose and then make career choices that contribute to that goal have a unique peace and sense of fulfillment.
